Theme for Samoa Language Week

la malu lou sā. Folau i lagimā

A well-grounded self is a successful self.

There was much collaboration in the past when building ocean sailing vessels. Samoans were expected to seek far and wide and be thorough when putting together parts of such a vessel. Cultural protocols were observed prior to the start of work, engaging the wider community and to highlight the importance of such a project in the life of the community. Seeking divine blessings for such a project is part of these protocols. Priorities are placed on constructing parts of the vessel that are considered critical.

Sailing vessels demanded knowledge of the environment, oceans and tides and celestial navigation to ensure watertight construction. Any leakages would render the vessel to be unworthy, therefore, priority to ensure there were no leakages in the vessel was of utmost important to the builders.

The priority of the travellers/voyagers is paramount. The thoroughness required to do this involved not only seeking knowledge from others, but that of observing nature. Changes to the seasons, the strength of ocean currents, the winds and weather patterns are all observed. The ability to sail far is dependent on the strength of the vessel's structure, it's linings and rigging and its maintenance.

Prioritising areas considered critical to success is comparable to the carving of ocean sailing vessels. Retention and strengthening aspects considered critical to any person is essential for fulfilling potential. A person's language, culture, identity, and character need to be developed and retained. The environment that allows the growth of such characters needs to be established.

The theme strongly suggests that an individual achieving his or her potential requires a supportive environment. It strongly suggests that people achieving successes are products of collective endeavours and community support. The theme is clear that finding success for every individual in any society is most challenging. It recommends that putting support at the start is critical.

A well-crafted ocean sailing vessel, built with care and precision, ensures a safe and steady journey. When all its parts are thoughtfully constructed, the vessel remains balanced, strong and ready to face the open seas.

Similarly, people who prepare thoroughly and with intention become grounded and resilient and well-equipped to navigate life's challenges and succeed in their endeavours. No matter the challenges and hardships of life, a well-grounded person will not be easily shaken or defeated because they are firmly rooted and well-prepared.
